RESEARCH STATEMENT

I have a strong record of learning new techniques quickly if it appears necessary for a research project, as well as successfully exporting ideas and tools from one field to another. My PhD thesis includes, among other things, a Hodge module theoretic approach to certain questions in birational geometry and topology of algebraic maps. It was awarded the Best Thesis in Mathematics at Northwestern University. During my postdoc years in Bonn I shifted my focus to hyperkähler geometries, especially Lagrangian fibrations, where I now combine techniques from moduli of sheaves, derived categories, D-modules and Hodge theory. Following this trajectory, one of my latest directions employs techniques from derived de Rham cohomology, and motivic cohomology. This demonstrates how my research continues to build upon and integrate diverse mathematical ideas.

As of February 2026, I have 9 publications and preprints, which is typical for my research area. Some of my recent papers are in journals such as IMRN (2024) and Algebra and Number theory (2019). I do not have joint papers with my PhD supervisor.
